Meningo-encephalitis tuberculosis is an extra pulmonary form of disease and represents 4-5% of the total cases of tuberculosis. We present the case of an older woman, age 80, that was hospitalized for prolonged febrile syndrome. The particularity of this case is the association of the acute nephritis, a possible cause of the febrile syndrome, and the fact that meningo-encephalitis is not accompanied of the pulmonary tuberculosis.